

Network Considerations

With the Advantage network you get care at hospitals and generally pay similar prices from one to another. With the Summit network, some services are available only at hospitals, while others are also available at surgical or imaging centers with prices varying from one facility to the next. With both networks you get access to doctors' offices, where prices can vary. The Summit network also provides rebates for certain procedures; see Benefits Summary.

Live in Rural Utah? If so, consider which group of Wasatch Front providers you prefer when you choose your network. In addition to any personal preference or need for network-specific care, consider whether your local hospital and doctors are more likely to refer you to specialty care from Advantage (Intermountain) or Summit (University, Iasis, or MountainStar) providers and where emergency transport would most likely send you. Remember, while your local contracted providers are in all of PEHP's networks, contracted providers along the Wasatch Front are not. Getting care from an out-of-network provider almost always means that PEHP will pay less, and you could be subject to balance billing.

Note About Cache Valley Hospital » Cache Valley Hospital will be available on the Summit network July 1, 2017, and Logan Regional Hospital will only be available for Advantage and Preferred. This change also may affect individual providers in the Cache Valley area. For details, see www.pehp.org/cache or call PEHP at 801-366-7555.
